"I think tonight's topic will hit home with mothers of 3, 4, and 5 year olds, Arabic language teachers, and anyone who had a bad experience while learning how to read and write Arabic."

"Before we teach children more languages, they need to master their mother tongue, and to master it, they must like it. Perhaps the Abjad project is a step towards bringing children and the Arabic language together again."

“While you were studying the Arabic language did you feel that it was difficult and needed to be made easier?”

“Yes. My college professor told me the first ten years of learning the language are always the most difficult! After that it starts to get easier.”

“After I asked you how long it would take to teach a child using your system, I realized that regardless of the time factor, the real difference is that children using your system are enjoying their time as opposed to children who are usually in tears doing their work! I would really like to congratulate you on this project and the ingenious method with which you solved such a genuine burden on our children.”
